Questions About Catalyst Capital Group

April 11, 2018 / by Roddy Boyd

It was corporate skulduggery at its most audacious. Last September Frank Newbould dined at Scaramouche, a swanky downtown Toronto restaurant, with a businessman who said he would like to hire Newbould as an arbitrator. In reality, this was a ruse [...]

Mr. Boyer's War

April 11, 2018 / by Roddy Boyd

For eight years, Craig Boyer was a senior executive at Callidus Capital, and by the time he quit in 2016 he was its chief underwriter and vice president. But last year Boyer sued Callidus for CA$100,000 in damages, claiming the company [...]

Wirecard AG: The Great Indian Shareholder Robbery

January 23, 2018 / by Roddy Boyd

Wirecard AG is the luckiest company you've never heard of. It has the good luck of a boxer who's a master of bobbing and weaving in the ring, making it difficult for an opponent to land a punch. Prizefights, though, [...]

DaVita Inc.: Warren And Charlie's Excellent Insurance Gambit

September 23, 2017 / by Roddy Boyd

Veteran card players pride themselves on the ability to discern what's known as "the tell," the series of involuntary mannerisms that can betray a rival's strategic deceptions and even suggest a possible next move. Then there are those rare occasions [...]

BOFI Federal Savings: Annals of the Bank of Misery, Part I

June 28, 2017 / by Roddy Boyd

If you put together all the chief executive officers from the financial services industry in one room and asked them, “Who looks back on the years 2007 to 2009 with fondness?” it’s a very safe bet that only one hand would be [...]

BOFI Federal Savings: Disclosing Little, And Saying Less

June 28, 2017 / by Roddy Boyd

BOFI Federal Bank’s disclosure practices seem baffling at best if the standard it’s judged by is how well it informs investors about developments that could potentially change the risk profile of their capital. In fairness to BOFI, the key word here [...]

Synchronoss Technologies: You Probably Wouldn't Buy a Car From These Guys

March 27, 2017 / by Roddy Boyd

The velocity of the destruction of Synchronoss Technologies investors' capital is brutal to behold: In less than four months, the value of their investments has been halved. There's a reason for that. On Dec. 6 Bridgewater, New Jersey-based Synchronoss announced an unusual [...]

Valeant Pharmaceuticals: The End Of The Michael Pearson Era

March 23, 2017 / by Roddy Boyd

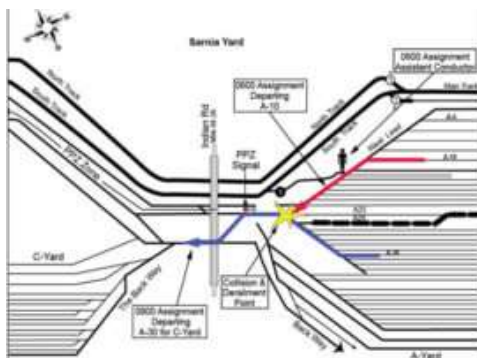

Valeant Pharmaceuticals International, the corporate poster-child for price-gouging, tax-inversion and hedge-fund manager wealth destruction quietly severed all ties with J. Michael Pearson, its former chief executive officer and longtime guiding light, in January according to its annual proxy statement filed [...]

Canadian National Railway: The Great Railroad Construction Robbery

December 12, 2016 / by Roddy Boyd

For much of the past two decades Canadian National Railway Co. has been credited with revolutionizing the North American railroad industry. The company's former chief executive E. Hunter Harrison's theory of "precision railroading" — a data-driven focus on charging customers [...]
